These two mental processes, assimilation and accomodation, are thought to be going on all the time; but one or the other will be more dominant in any given mental activity. If airway limitation is also present you may experience symptoms of wheezing, chest tightness and breathlessness. The story is actually quite intense, with many challenges adapting jump scares, scene changes, and blood to the stage.

latter claim is symptomatic of cultural criticism, and surely part of its appeal is that we are allowed to be relatively free from anxiety about what we are doing when we speak or write on a subject such as the Said phenomenon.
